

Team Canada on Parliament Hill in Ottawa

Message from Clarke McGuire, team Canada manager:

"We were flown over 4000 km to Ottawa on Ontario to receive an award on Parliament Hill from the C.E.A. the Canadian Electricity Association for serving to educate twenty countries in the dangers of high voltage to first responders in the field while at the Rallye Rejviz 2012 with the Epsilon scenario. The awards were presented by a local Member of Parliament MP Mark Warawa and by Canada's Minister of Labour Lisa Raitt.

We in turn praised the Rallye Rejviz and your efforts for your role and how you bolster our profession world wide. The C.E.A. communications staff told us how they had been to our website and the RR website many times and was thrilled at what they found and how we promoted everyone involved and placed lot's of emphasis on safety.

I presented this framed award to our union the Ambulance Paramedics of BC as they have supported us without question each year we have attended and I will submit my award (not framed) to the BC Ambulance Service in good faith for their perusal. Our team was written up in the C.E.A. Achieving Excellence in Health and Safety booklet which is their 2012 Report on health and safety performance trends and improvement initiatives across Canada."
